

Your Money Manifesting Muscle

Your money choices and what they really mean

BACKGROUND

Making a decision solely based upon the dollar amount that this decision would bring is nothing short of a huge mistake. Do you know these urban myths about people suddenly attracting an unexpected sum of money only to, a couple of days after, have an unexpected expense eat up most of that cash? Well, it's not a myth. Changing the amount of money you bring in without changing your money consciousness can't get you any real abundance.

One Simple Question

This exercise is really simple.

Imagine that you are being offered a gig, a paid gig, which you are capable of completing. The gig pays X dollars. You know that you can earn more than X, doing something else. Before you have a chance to say "yes" or "no" to that offer, you are being offered another gig. You can also do that, and the pay is Y dollars, which is slightly more than what you usually earn for your time, knowledge and effort.

Which option would you choose? the first gig or the second gig? Really, stop and think about this question. Have your answer? Great.

Your Money Instinct

I'm guessing you didn't go for the first gig, that would be foolish, right? So we're left with the second gig. It's the better choice right? Well, no. At least, not necessarily. If your answer wasn't "I need more information before I can choose" and your instinct was to go with the second gig, then let's stop for a second and think about this: You have no idea what will be required from you.

What if the first gig is assisting a mentor that can teach you how to make loads of money doing what you love, or being a sampler of ice cream (I'm assuming you love ice cream and would actually enjoy this gig, so please replace ice cream with another food item or beverage if that's not the case). Or what if the first gig is just OK, nothing too special, but doing the second gig will leave you exhausted or unhappy?

This is not some far fetched idea, this is the reality in which the majority of the world lives. A reality in which you are conditioned to choose the job that pays you MORE money. Most people actually struggle with themselves or with those close to them, if they take a job that pays them less of their earning potential, simply because they are doing so simply because it 'feels good'.

REMEMBER

We live in a world that is moving more and more towards self realization. How you spend your time and the work that you do are two very important factors in your quality of life, and an improved quality of life can help you manifest what you want. A tired and stressed out individual doing work that he hates cannot manifest as easily and as powerfully as a happy, self fulfilled and relaxed individual.

So next time you have this dilemma, please remember that your quality of life, as well as the amount of money you will eventually have in the bank, is influenced MORE by your state of mind, than by the actual amount you bring in from a day's work.
